TWISTER HITS GEORGIA TOWN, BODIES HUNTED

Nearly 100 Injured as Tornado Rips Through Industrial And Resort City.

ALBANY, Ga.—(AP)—Between 12 and 15 persons were killed and several hundred injured by the tornado which smashed the business section of this southwest Georgia city today.

(By Associated Press)

ALBANY, Ga.—A tornado killed several persons, injured between 75 and 100, and caused widespread property damage in this south Georgia industrial and resort city early today.

Two companies of National Guardsmen were ordered to the city by Gov. E. D. Rivers. Heavy rain followed the winds, preventing fires, but making rescue work difficult.

Debris littered streets of the city, with a (1930) population of 14,507. Communication and power lines were damaged.

W. B. Bryan, manager of the telephone company, said the storm struck the business area near the postoffice.

He said the new Albany hotel, the Gordon hotel, the St. Nicholas hotel, the Royal building, radio station WGPC and several other business structures along or near Pine avenue were damaged or demolished."

An estimate of the death toll awaited a check of street debris and the top floor of the unroofed St. Nicholas hotel.

Martha Percilla, Atlanta Journal correspondent, reported to her newspaper by telephone four hours after the storm "they are carrying out bodies."

She said one residential area five blocks south of the business area, the 400 blocks of Oglethorpe and Highland avenues, was "swept clean," by the tornado which struck the sleeping populace about 4:10 a. m.

Sixty state highway patrolmen were concentrated here from nearby cities to assist Albany authorities and guardsmen in rescue work

The Phoebe Putney Memorial hospital reported ambulances brought in injured persons so fast that floor space was used to care for them.

Trees were leveled, buildings unroofed and windows smashed. The clock was blown from the dome of the Dougherty county courthouse. The roof of the Binns hotel was damaged.

The city was plunged into darkness when power lines failed.

Relatives of Mansfield Residents In Albany

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Dann, 41 Parkwood boulevard, Mansfield, were deeply concerned today for the safety of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Dann of tornado-struck Albany, Ga. Lyman Dann is a brother of E. W. Dann. No word has been received by the Mansfield family on whether the Georgia relatives escaped the twister.

Optimism Reigns as Industry Joins C. of C. In Celebration

By JOSEPH E. KUEBLER

Industry, as represented by its leaders, tossed bouquets last night to Mansfield and the men whose job it is to see that the wheels of the factories keep turning here.

There were orchids, too, many of them, for the Chamber of Commerce, and its dynamic president, Clarence L. Van Derau.

The occasion was the chamber's 28th annual dinner meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel which brought together perhaps the greatest gathering of nationally-known industrial and business leaders in the city's history.

More than 400 crowded into the ballroom and the adjoining mezzanine for the dinner and program that followed. The speakers, guests and visitors who were presented were the "Who's Who" of Mansfield industry and business.

In many respects it was a celebration, a celebration in bringing together for the first time nationally famous industrialists who head companies that operate here—a celebration of the chamber's greatest year, a celebration of Mansfield's growth, a "city blessed with diversified industry."

From the start of the program until it was climaxed two hours later by a plea by Atty. Carl Henkel, former C. of C. president for all industries to "go forward together in the future development of Mansfield," there was a feeling of good will, of enthusiasm and unrestrained optimism.

Robertson Sounds Keynote.

A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, who was introduced as "one of the greatest industrial leaders of our time," sounded the keynote of the occasion.

Puts Task of Cutting Hours Before Council Committee

The puzzle of what to do about a shorter work-week for city policemen and firemen will be dumped into the lap of council's finance committee Monday by Mayor William J. Locke.

The mayor said this morning that he would ask the committee to meet with him to study a 72-hour week for firemen and a suggestion that policemen be given every seventh day off instead of every eighth day as is now provided.

Council Tuesday night passed an ordinance over the protest of Police Chief Meade K. Bates giving policemen every sixth day off instead of every eighth day. The bill still remains on the mayor's desk unsigned. He has until Feb. 16 to either sign it, veto it or let it become a law without his signature.

Firemen now work 84 hours weekly but a state law passed by the legislature last summer provides that they work only 72 hours.

The state department of industrial relations yesterday accused city officials of violating the law and warned them to comply or face court action.

Mansfield was one of eight Ohio cities given 30 days to invoke the shorter work week.

It means that council will have to provide at least four more men for the fire department or retire a part of the equipment from service, thus cutting down personnel.

The addition of four more firemen, each of whom would receive $1,320 for the first year, would boost the department budget $5,280.

Locke explained that the total loss of man-hours with every sixth day off would require the services of two additional officers on the police force and would hike the department's budget approximately $2,640 the first year, and to $3,000 annually after that.

Meanwhile Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton withheld calling for bids for the purchase of a new cruiser for the police department until the matter of hours is cleared up.

Ponders Coming Tour By Welles For War Survey

Announcement of Visit by Roosevelt's Emissary Causes Fuehrer's Immediate Return to Berlin; Official Views Await Parley With Ribbentrop.

(By International News Service)

BERLIN—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler returned from Munich to Berlin today to give his personal attention to President Roosevelt's announcement that Sumner Welles will shortly make a personal tour of Europe.

While some skepticism over the practicability of any American peace offensive was apparent in informed circles, all formal comment on the project was withheld until Hitler himself has studied the entire situation.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop is expected to return to work on Monday after a ten days' illness, and the fuehrer's ultimate reaction probably will await a conference with this most trusted adviser.

In the meantime, well-informed circles predicted that an exchange of views between Hitler and Premier Mussolini was extremely likely prior to Welles' arrival.

Germany will extend Mr. Roosevelt's emissary every courtesy, it was said, and his arrival in Berlin is awaited with keenest interest. The reich was cautious about any advance commitments, however, and the expression "a second Colonel House affair" was heard continually.

Hitler's own preoccupation with the forthcoming visit, it was learned, particularly concerns its relation to a possible general peace move. This factor was believed to account for the official reticence which amounted almost to silence.

American resumption of direct activities in Europe made a deep impression, although experts were divided upon the significance of Mr. Roosevelt's move. Most observers were inclined to believe that the president is determined to make a real peace effort after Welles has returned to Washington, although by that time the military situation may compel him to reconsider.

Spokesmen delegated to talk with the undersecretary on his arrival will undoubtedly make plain to Welles that Germany is determined to "safeguard its own security and put an end once and for all to British hegemony over the European continent."

The point will be stressed that ideologies of the present German government do not permit interference in internal policies by any outside power and that any comprehensive peace agreement "must eliminate the possibility of hostile combinations against the reich."

It was emphasized that it is up to France and Britain to abandon their proclaimed intention of

WASHINGTON: Roosevelt's Peace Step Called League Move

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt's peace moves were given general congressional approval today with some congressmen seeing in them the seeds of a "League of Neutral Nations."

Announcement of preliminary conversations initiated by the state department with certain, unnamed neutral nations to study "common problems of future peace," brought various interpretations and reactions. Some congressmen frankly opposed any move to set up a bloc of neutral nations.

State department officials would not admit that they were working on such an ambitious plan. But the apparent objectives of a bloc of neutrals would correspond with Secretary of State Cordell Hull's repeated declarations that plans must be laid now to assist in "the eventual restoration of world peace on a sound and lasting basis."

Administration spokesmen discouraged the hopes that appear to have been aroused in some European capitals that the forthcoming tour of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and announcement of the preliminary diplomatic conversations would lead to specific peace proposals by the United States.

Welles leaves for a visit to Rome, Paris, Berlin and London a week from today. Before then, it was believed, he and the president would confer with Joseph P. Kennedy and William C. Bullitt, Mr. Roosevelt's leading ambassadors in Europe.

Bullitt arrived here yesterday by clipper plane from his post in Paris for the announced purpose of giving a routine report to the state department. Kennedy has been in this country since before Christmas.

HELSINKI: Reds Battering Finn Forts With Bombs, Shells

(By International News Service)

HELSINKI—Using hundreds of bombing airplanes and blasting Finnish positions with thousands of shells, the Red army at dawn today redoubled its desperate efforts to crack the forts on the Mannerheim line.

In a battle which probably has not been equalled in Europe since the World war, the Russians sent vast tides of men surging northward, only to break against the unyielding Mannerhein wall.

Each wave was preceded by fleets of tanks which peppered the outlying Finnish defenses with light artillery and machine-gun fire, but all accounts indicated that every attack was repelled.

Attacks which spread yesterday along the whole line, continued through the night, but were intensified with the break of day as the Russian commanders, disregarding losses, launched assaults from the Gulf of Finland to Lake Ladoga.

Hundreds were added to the several thousand Russians already killed in the long Russian campaign to break through on the Karelian isthmus.

As the campaign spread from one or two focal points to a concerted drive all along the line, the snow in front of the pill boxes and forts of the Mannerheim defenses was spotted with bodies, and reports said that Soviet communications to the south were so poor that hundreds of wounded were left to die.

(Moscow's communique reported: "Nothing of importance at the front. The enemy's repeated attempts to recover lost positions on the Karelian isthmus were repulsed with heavy enemy losses. Soviet planes successfully bombed military objectives.")

Reports which have been growing, especially in Swedish quarters, that the Mannerheim line had been penetrated at one point to a depth

Toledo Gas Service Restored as CIO, Company Agree

200 GO BACK TO POSTS AS STRIKE ENDS

3 Per Cent Monthly Payroll Increase Allowed; Union to Decide Apportionment.

(By Associated Press)

TOLEDO — Two hundred men went back to their jobs today and full gas service restored to private and commercial consumers as the CIO Gas Workers union voted ratification of a two-year contract, ending a nine-day strike.

Walter Ross, president of local 12,024 of the gas and by-products, coke and chemical workers, said the contract provided an immediate 3 per cent increase in the monthly payrolls of the affiliated Ohio Fuel Gas and Northwestern Ohio Gas companies.

The union is empowered to study the present scale and decide how the increase will be apportioned.

Another 3 per cent raise was made contingent upon the outcome of rate negotiations with the city. It will become effective with the signing of a new rate accord, but in the event no suitable agreement is reached with the city, the additional raises will go into effect between April 1 and June 1, 1941.

Ross said the contract, carrying a 30-day renewal clause, also provides the check-off system, recognition of the union, sole bargaining rights and provisions protecting temporary employes.

Ross said foremen were declared eligible for union membership pending arbitration by the state public utilities commission. Another contract provision set up a board of four, two company and two union men, to rule on accident claims.

The union struck Feb. 1 for a 12½ per cent wage increase, seniority rights, a union shop and a contract at the outset, service to several big industrial consumers was curtailed and several hundred men made temporarily idle. Service was maintained by emergency crews.

Attorneys Turn Down Integration Proposal for Bar

By a vote of 35 to 10, Richland county attorneys yesterday turned down a proposal to integrate the Ohio bar a "closed shop" unit.

An expression of opinion on the integration plan had been requested by the Ohio State Bar association, and the county attorneys, members of the Richland County Bar association, conducted their election by secret ballot at the courthouse.

The resolution, presented by Atty. L. H. Beam and amended on a motion by Atty. George Biddle, read: "Resolved, That We go on Record for Integration in Principle and Plan."

Under the integration plan which is now in practice in Michigan and other states, the state bar association is an all-inclusive group with the power to discipline its members for violations of the bar code. The Ohio plan requires that a court disbar attorneys or punish them for infractions.

An integrated bar could also require membership in the state association and collect dues from each member attorney.

A report of the election here will be sent to the state bar association. The election was in charge of Atty. James W. Galbraith, new president of the county bar association.

An irate voice—a feminine one—called police headquarters at 3 a. m. today to inquire of Deskman Paul Martin if officers couldn't do something about the loud radio next door—she couldn't sleep. Martin, always ready to assist a lady in distress, said he would see what could be done about it. Officers went to the home but instead of a radio they found a roomer happily playing a phonograph at that odd hour. He was told to shut it off.

Referring to this as the "coldest winter since 1883" reminds a Mansfield oldtimer that just 41 years ago yesterday the thermometers dropped to 25 degrees below zero in the city. That was the day of the big fire at the old Baxter Stove plant, one of the biggest conflagrations in the history of the city. The temperature for that month, as Oldtimer recalls it, was around zero and below, the entire month.

The so-called "Mehock Luck" ran true to form again today, and Harry Mehock, director of physical education in Mansfield schools, is almost certain that the postponed Silver Skates skating carnival can be held early next week. Mehock's only request yesterday after calling off the competition scheduled today was rain. When Harry took a peak outside early today, it was raining enough, he believed, to fill the ice holes at North Lake park. Six hundred students from Mansfield schools have entered the competition.

It was a Loudonville reader who pointed out the News-Journal's headline welcome to the plumbing contractors who conventioned in Mansfield this week. In Monday's issue these two headlines appeared on the front page in identical positions: "More Water Main Breaks Plague City," and "400 Plumbers In City For 3-Day Parley." "What better time," demands the Loudonville reader, to have the mains break or to have a plumbers convention?" Could it be possible that the water department had the mains break just as a nice gesture of welcome for the plumbers?

He was to be taken before Probate Judge C. J. Anderson today for a hearing.

DAILY SCRAPBOOK— By R. J. Scott

Welcome From 'Famous Five' to N-J Readers

Here are two of the most widely publicized faces in the world and anyone who knows anything can tell at a glance that here are the Dionnes again.

One is Annette and one is Marie and there is little difference between them today. But five years ago Annette was the husky baby of the five little girls, while Marie was the runt and there was little hope that she would live.

Scientific care and the wisdom of a back woods doctor developed the ugly, wrinkled babies—the world's first quintuplets to live—into the husky children they are today.

The Five Little Dionnes and How They Grow is one of the most amazing and interesting stories in the annals of medical science. In picturized version this story will come to readers of The News-Journal's Sunday edition, starting tomorrow and every Sunday thereafter.

The camera man catches the quints in the schoolroom, in the dining room and the play grounds of their nursery home as they go about the daily routine of life.

The first picture feature of the quints appears in tomorrow's paper.

SEES GOOD YEAR

Robertson Blasts Legend That Election Hurts Business.

"The fear that business must be poor in a presidential election year is unfounded," A. W. Robertson, board chairman of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, said here today.

He predicted that 1940 would be a good year, and pointed out that the present slight drop in general business is to be expected after the unusual spurt in the last quarter of 1939.

"Under modern conditions," Robertson said, "There is every reason to expect better business in a presidential election year. We will remember that 1936 was one of the better years.

"Government is a substantial factor in the business cycle and in an election year government prefers at least mild prosperity. If general conditions are favorable this attitude of government in favor of prosperity is most helpful."

Accompanied by George Bucher, president of the Westinghouse company, Robertson spent the day conferring with officials of the company's merchandising division and inspecting the division's headquarters plant. He and Bucher were among the speakers at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night.

TAKE EDISON'S BIRTHDAY AS 'JUST ANOTHER DAY' AT MILAN

(By Associated Press)

MILAN, O.—Milan is miffed—but not much.

Port Huron, Mich., where Thomas A. Edison spent his boyhood, is putting one over on the inventor's birthplace.

The Michigan city of 31,361 residents—46 times as many as Milan's 678—is host today—at $3.30 top, to the world premiere of the picture, "Young Tom Edison." Star Mickey Rooney is there, and Ted Fio Rito's orchestra is playing for the big dance in the high school gymnasium tonight.

"I think Milan has a better claim," asserted H. D. Moore, mayor of this northern Ohio community. "But you can't get Milan worked up to anything."

Furthermore, Milan plans no observance of tomorrow's 93rd anniversary of the inventor's birth.

Rev. William Henry Norman, pastor of the Thomas A. Edison Memorial Methodist church, said he would call attention of his members to the birthday, but was making no mention of it in his Sunday sermon, "The Remodeled Life."

Miss Marietta Wadsworth, a second cousin of Edison, was invited to the Port Huron observance but is unable to attend because of a broken hip suffered last July. She has been confined to bed in the seven-room brick house where her distinguished relative was born.

Asked if she thought the Port Huron celebration should instead center in Milan's only moviehouse, the Star theater, she replied:

"Mr. Edison left Milan when he was 7½ years old. That's why they are holding it there."

BUCYRUS WOMAN DIES AT AGE 95

Mrs. Mary Schoenzlin Had Been Bedfast for Eight Years.

BUCYRUS—Mrs. Mary D. Schoenzlin, 95, one of the oldest residents of Crawford county, died at her home today after a lingering illness. She had been bedfast eight years.

Mrs. Schoenzlin was born in Germany, Nov. 6, 1844 and came to Crawford county before she was a year old. She was a member of the Good Hope Lutheran church and Ladies Aid society. There are no immediate survivors.

Funeral services will be held at the Henderson and Lutz funeral home at 2 p. m. Monday with Rev. H. H. Glick of Good Hope Lutheran church officiating. Burial will be in Oakwood cemetery.

DEFIANCE, O.—(INS)—Heavy rainfall, accompanied by thawing weather, might cause damaging flood conditions in the valleys of the Maumee and Auglaize rivers, already coated with ice 13 to 18 inches thick, river observers feared today.

3RD TERM, G.O.P. POWER HEADED FOR SHOWDOWN

Roosevelt, Garner Entered on Democratic Side; LaGuardia, Dewey, Fish Compete.

(By United Press)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Illinois become the first proving ground for presidential candidates today with President Roosevelt and Vice President John N. Garner pitted against each other in the Democratic primary campaign and Thomas E. Dewey, Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia of New York and Rep. Hamilton Fish entered in the Republican contest.

The April 9 primary was expected to test the strength of New Deal third term advocates who placed Mr. Roosevelt's name on the ballot without his formal declaration of candidacy. Garner's declaration accompanied the petition which placed him in the campaign. The state certification board had not yet determined whether Illnois primary law required that declarations must accompany the petitions.

Garner's petition was entered late yesterday to accompany the Roosevelt petition filed a week ago. The petition for La Guardia was filed last night to accompany those of Fish and Dewey which had been filed earlier.

La Guardia's petition also was filed without his declaration and in New York the mayor said that he knew nothing about it and did not know who had entered the petition.

His petition, bearing 4177 signatures, was filed by Hamilton Wilde, Chicago, as a representative of the Ross Research corporation. Wilde said that his firm's New York office had requested him to obtain the signatures but that he was not advised who had asked the New York office to originate the petition action.

Filed by Editor.

Garner's petition carried about 4,900 signatures and were filed by Emil Hurja, Washington, D. C., editor; Julius Smietanka, Chicago attorney, and Col. William M. Bannon, Chicago businessman.

Petitions placing Mr. Roosevelt's name in the primaries also had been filed in Wisconsin, where the primary will be held April 2. Garner supporters said that they expected to file their petitions in that campaign, too.

Support for the president also was promised in Nebraska where 50 state Democratic leaders voted to place his name in the April 9 primary.

UP 19 PER CENT

Sales Tax Receipts Ahead of Average For State.

Sales tax receipts in Richland county for the first five weeks of 1940 were up 19 per cent over last year while the average increase in the state was only 10.8 per cent, State Treasurer Don H. Ebright reported today.

County collections for the period were $37,700, a gain of $6,100 over the corresponding period of 1939. Total receipts in the state were $3,103,816, representing an increase of approximately $280,000 over last year's figures.

For the final week of January the county produced $9,301 in sales tax receipts as against $8,724 for the corresponding week in 1939, a difference of $577.

Drivers Plead Guilty To Excessive Loading of Trucks.

GREENWICH—Pleading guilty to charges of operating trucks loaded in excess of the legal limit, C. M. Keith, 24, of Nova, and William C. Rinker, 28, R. D. 2, Tiffin, were given fines of $25 and costs when arraigned in court here yesterday afternoon.

Keith was arrested at 5 p. m. by highway patrolmen and arraigned before Acting Mayor F. M. Black of Greenwich, and Rinker, arrested at 2 p. m., was arraigned before Mayor R. A. Dove. Both drivers were arrested on route 13 in Huron county.

Not That It Matters

It's Hard to Make Sense Out of This Squable on Working Hours of Police

—By JANE WILLIAMS

MANSFIELD people were frankly puzzled this week when city council approved a bill reducing the hours of the police force in view of the fact that Police Chief Meade K. Bates has insisted that he can't do a good police job because of a shortage of men. Councilman-at-large Philip Smith, who so recently bemoaned the fact that the present police force isn't enough to take care of the traffic problem, introduced the bill to reduce police hours. If all that adds up to a correct answer, then the alleged educators who taught me that two and two make four were just plain nuts.

Mansfield police — 28 men — now have every eighth day off, two weeks with pay in the summer and are allowed 90 days with pay for sick leave. The bill which council approved would give each man 15 more days off in each year, with a net loss to the department of about 426 man days, or 3,408 hours.

Yet Smith (who is chairman of the new traffic committee of city council) claims this won't in any way cripple police service.

Then why all the fireworks about more police? If the boys in uniform get these additional days off—fine. But don't confuse us ordinary citizens with annual pleas of more man hours needed to solve the traffic problem.

NO ONE can blame the police lads themselves for wanting more days off with pay—don't we all?—nor for trying to better their working conditions.

Consider the first municipal police in the world, and THEIR working conditions. Three hundred years before Christ, the policemen of Rome had something to worry about. Their working conditions were sort of bad. They had to do all of the work of repairing the streets and sewers, street cleaning, fire fighting, general police work and protecting pedestrians from speeding chariots.

And there were pranksters then as now. It was thought very funny to turn in a false fire alarm and make the police run their legs off for nothing.

In spite of all these various duties they did a pretty good job of policing and fire fighting for 500 years—except that time when the fire got out of control while Nero sat around and fiddled.

THE LEAGUE of Women Voters will have a public non-partisan political meeting Wednesday night at the American Legion hall when both candidates for the congressional special election will be presented.

It will be the first time for such a meeting in Mansfield. I have always held the belief that all the political party meetings aren't worth a whoop in—well, they aren't worth much to candidates. Because every Democrat who attends political rallies of his party will vote for his candidates, and every Republican will do likewise. Candidates make a net gain only when they corral votes that they win away from the opposition, and in order to do this they must talk to voters of both parties. But they are never given a chance because only Democrats go to Democratic rallies and only Republicans go to Republican rallies.

But there still are many independent thinkers who want to know both sides of a question. The League hopes to provide that opportunity in Mansfield.

NOTES ON THE CUFF: Did anyone think that "His Girl Friday" was an authentic newspaper story? Or that there ever was a managing editor who looked like Cary Grant? . . . Rachel Fields, who authored "All This and Heaven Too," and "Time Out of Mind," will address Columbus newspaper women and Theta Sigma Phi in that city Feb. 27. . . . Sometimes even the profile is more than we can stand of Barrymore. . . . Was SO surprised to read that Walt Disney's voice is familiar to millions, for he does the talking for all of his Mickey Mouse pictures. . . .

CLYDE MOORE of the Ohio State Journal says that Ohio has balanced its budget and has a bank balance of $3,369,268 and that the New Deal has an investigator looking into the matter. Probably thinks there's something crooked about this unusual situation.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Pegler Says Pardon For Ellis Parker Would Be Just a Dirty Document

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Eight thousand friends of Ellis Parker, the celebrated hick detective, had signed a petition for a presidential pardon before he died last Sunday in the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., the Groton of the prison system, where he was serving six years for kidnaping and torturing an innocent man to compel him to confess to the Lindbergh murder.

It is now intended to pursue the matter, anyway, so that Parker's honor may be restored posthumously, if there be any legal precedent for such a stroke.

This is another of those melancholy developments which give rise to despair that public officers in the United States ever will be held to a decent standard of honesty and responsibility.

Parker was an intelligent man who often made boast of his cunning, and the crime for which he was sent to prison was the more vicious because he was a trusted peace officer with a national reputation, attributable in large part to the enthusiasm and, it may be, the gullibility of metropolitan reporters.

Many another man whom Parker himself put away for offenses which were trivial by comparison is still in prison, and the proof presented in Parker's trial that he was a treacherous faker obsessed with an ambition to get convictions regardless, and thus swell his cheap little record and his vanity, should remand the courts of New Jersey of more urgent demands on their solicitude.

Some of those whom he convicted went to the chair, but some large number are still confined in much worse prisons than the genteel federal clink in which he was quietly putting in his time for a horrible offense, puttering in the library.

When he was convicted, his guilt was shown beyond any doubt, and there were no extenuating circumstances. Not only did he know what he was doing, but he left his own jurisdiction to do it, and for no other reason than to harvest another stack of newspaper clippings and possibly some pickings for ghosted pieces under his name.

In view of all the facts, it is plain that Parker deliberately chose to sacrifice his own honor, that he suffered no injustice, but, on the contrary, got off much better than some of the dumb, blundering ignoramuses whom he sent away for longer terms in much worse prisons, and that a pardon after death or any other gesture of condonation or forgiveness would be a sneer at the half-forgotten ideal of decency in public office.

Pardons are for men who have been convicted by mistake, or, having done their time, rehabilitate themselves by going straight.

Parker was guilty, and he hadn't finished a term which wasn't half of what he deserved, and a pardon, if one is issued, will be only a dirty political document granted for the satisfaction of dirty politicians who made a political issue of the Lindbergh case.

SUNDAY TOPIC

'Spirit' to be Subject of Weekly Scientist Lesson-Sermon.

"Spirit" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Church of Christ, Scientist, Sunday.

The Golden Text is: "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth" (John 4:24.)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Am I a God at hand, saith the Lord, and not a God afar off? . . . Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the Lord. Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the Lord" (Jeremiah 23: 23,24).

INDUSTRY JOINS IN CHAMBER'S CELEBRATION

"I am leaving this meeting tonight with more optimism, with more feeling that everything is right with the world, than ever before," he said.

Robertson and George H. Bucher, president of Westinghouse, came here yesterday from Pittsburgh, especially for the meeting.

"Mr. Bucher and I were especially anxious to come to Mansfield to do honor to this branch of the Westinghouse company," he added. "Its results during the past year were the best the division ever had."

He then touched briefly on the national situation.

"If our government which spends so much time finding fault with everything would send its investigators to the next meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, it would hear a wonderful story of industrial and civic co-operation.

"Perhaps the government could learn something. If it could copy this set-up here over the nation, what a different world we would have. As far as I can gather, there is no trouble here between management and labor. If it can be done here, it can be done other places."

Bucher paid tribute to Mansfield as a good factory town because it has "good schools and good homes." He said the name of Mansfield was known throughout the world from its exports.

Another nationally famous industrialist who came to Mansfield for the meeting was Henry A. Roemer, president of the Pittsburgh Steel company, chairman of the board of the Empire Steel and Tin Plate company, and the head of several other steel companies.

Roemer paid tribute to Westinghouse, to the genius of its leaders, and then lauded "Carl Henkel, the man who took Empire out of the most troublesome period in its history." Henkel, former president of Empire, headed the company during its reorganization about six years ago.

James M. Hill, president of Empire, was the other recipient of Roemer's praise.

"A man who keeps his feet on the ground, who knows labor and its problems, is Jim Hill," Roemer said. "I give him full credit for the fine relations that exist between the management and employes of Empire."

George W. Stephens, president of the Mansfield Tire & Rubber company, and a director of the chamber, said "we are all proud of the Chamber of Commerce and in having a man like Van Derau as its leader." He paid tribute to the enthusiasm and aggressiveness of the chamber president.

Talks on Highway Problems.

Another speaker was Col. Robert Beightler, director of the state highway department, who represented Gov. John W. Bricker at the dinner.

Beightler, who spoke on highway problems and told of his unrelenting campaign to reduce traffic accidents, said: "I will continue to present the case of traffic safety to the bar of public opinion as often as I get an opportunity during my term."

He pointed out how the economic system of the nation depends on its highway system, of the need for more multi-lane highways and cited the importance of strategic highways as a part of the national defense.

George B. Chamber, executive vice president of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, told of the two "great achievements" by the state of Ohio in the past year.

"They were the defeat by more than a million votes of the Bigelow amendment and the passage by the last legislature of the best relief law in the nation," he said.

Last December the Pennsylvania railroad announced to the chamber that it would spend $75,000 in modernizing and rebuilding its Mansfield station. Last night J. C. White, general manager of the central region of the railroad with offices at Pittsburgh, reassured the city on this project.

Says Station Assured.

"We are only waiting on improved weather conditions to start work," White said amidst applause. "I can assure you that the plans are in the hands of our architects and we expect to give you more than you anticipate."

Other railroad executives who spoke were A. A. Iams, general superintendent of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Cincinnati, and A. W. Baker of Marion, division superintendent of the Erie railroad.

"The year 1939 was a good one for the B. & O. and as a result we have some money to spend for a new station here that I can assure you will fully meet the needs of Mansfield," he said.

The B. & O. announced last month that it would spend $7,500 in building a new passenger station here.

Van Derau, in opening the annual dinner, recounted briefly the history of the Chamber of Commerce and its growth from 158 members five years ago to an all-time high of 640 last October.

"Mansfield is a city blessed with diversified industries which had a payroll of $14,500,000 last year," he said. "The reason the city is growing is because its industries are growing."

Among those Van Derau introduced during the evening were.

Members of city council, Mayor William J. Locke, Paul W. Williams, who resigned as secretary of the chamber last spring to become managing director of the Dayton C. of C.; the board of county commissioners and other county officers; W. L. Miller, superintendent of schools and members of the board of education; architects for the new school buildings; John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Mansfield chamber.

Carl Stander, president of the Richland County Auto club; A. L. Allen, chairman of the water and sewer committee of the chamber; R. A. Calene, president of the Retail Merchants association; Murray Shaffer, division engineer of the state highway department; L. E. Osborne, manager of manufacturing and engineering of Westinghouse; Frank Kohnstamm, sales manager of Westinghouse; Allan Tappan, vice president of the Tappan Stove company; M. W. Manz, retiring president of the Manufacturers association who represented the new president, C. A. Hines, who was out of the city.

W. G. Moore, president of the Humphryes Manufacturing company; T. O. Kennedy of Cleveland, vice president and general manager of the Ohio Public Service company; James M. Hill, president of Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company; George L. Draffan, executive vice president of the Ohio Brass company.

Rail Officials Presented.

Other railroad officials introduced were R. H. Miller, Pittsburgh, general freight agent of the Pennsylvania; F. R. Rex, Pittsburgh, superintendent of the Eastern division of the Pennsylvania; D. K. Chase, Pittsburgh, general superintendent of the Eastern Ohio division of the Pennsylvania; C. G. Magruder, Canton, district freight agent of the Pennsylvania; E. B. Hankey, Pittsburgh, assistant general freight agent of the Pennsylvania; H. H. Harsh, Newark, division superintendent of the B. & O.; R. L. Galleher, Cincinnati, general freight agent of the B. & O.; Carl Moiser, Newark, traveling freight agent of the B. & O. and J. E. Steele, Newark, division freight agent of the B. & O.

Rev. David N. Roller, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, pronounced the invocation.

Music during the evening were recordings made by Bob Richards and his Westinghouse orchestra. One of the numbers was a musical salute to Robertson and Bucher, the Westinghouse chairman and president.

LONDON NEVER HAD WORSE FOG

of Thomas F. Kelly, a sales executive of the Hoover company, Canton, received a fracture of her right arm and face lacerations about 5 p m. yesterday when the car in which she was riding collided with one driven by Ora O. Snyder, Lexington funeral director. She is in Mansfield General hospital.

The accident occurred on route 42 one and one-half miles south of Lexington. Kelly, who was driving the other car, told state highway patrolmen he failed to see Snyder's car because of the dense fog.

The fog cleared slightly when a light rain started to fall shortly before 10 a. m. today Temperatures that remained above freezing last night caused some of the ice and snow to melt on streets and highways and splotches of bare ear h appeared for the first time in more than a month. Lowest readings this morning was 33.

Rain is due to change to snow tonight as the weather turns colder, the forecast said. Sunday will be generally fair and colder.

BIGELOW STIRS OHIO POLITICOS

Pension Advocate's Latest Statement Indicates He'll Be Power at Primaries.

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI—Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow eased himself onto the Ohio political scene today as a power to be reckoned with in the May primaries.

The voters who favored his old-age pension plan in the last election could "without doubt" decide the Democratic nominee for governor in the primary, the preacher-politician said.

His pension proposal to guarantee incomes to persons over 60 polled 460,000 votes last November, 10,000 more than received by Charles Sawyer when he won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination two years ago by defeating former Gov. Martin L. Davey.

"We'll be back on the ballot," Bigelow challenged.

In his statement, prepared for a "pension plan bulletin," he made no mention of favorites but said "whoever is nominated on the Democratic ticket will ride in on the Roosevelt Coattails."

Some time ago Bigelow said he would not be a gubernatorial candidate, as proposed by followers.

The pension plan was the most heated issue in last November's election, with Bigelow demanding a guaranteed income to persons over 60—$50 a month for single persons and $80 for married couples. Opposition charged the plan would bankrupt the state.

Bigelow announced that he has re-drawn his pension proposals to overcome "objectionable" features.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1940.

Complaint from Japan is that Great Britain, the United States and France "are interfering in China"—and even the Chinese are not behaving as the invaders would like.

Review Past Year, Look to Future

A BETTER IDEA of what a strongly impelling force the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce has been in advancing the welfare of this community during the past two decades, and more particularly within the past five years, was gained by the 400 men who attended last night's annual meeting of that organization at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Visitors in the city—representatives of industries and of the three great railroads that serve Mansfield—were also given an unusual opportunity to estimate this community and to get a better idea of the spirit and energy that have been devoted to the task of advancing Mansfield industrially, commercially and along educational and cultural lines—to the end that this may become an increasingly desirable city in which to live.

With a program built along the novel plan of having a number of short talks by visitors and local representatives of industry, transportation and other civic activities, this meeting served to present an excellent cross-section of Mansfield—with a linking of past and present in a way to inspire confidence in the future.

The theme of the meeting centered around the recent achievement of gaining assurance from all railroad companies that improved passenger station facilities are to be provided as quickly as the work can be done.

Emphasis was also placed on the fact that during the past year Mansfield industries expended almost a million dollars in increasing plant facilities, with the city's population growing on an average of 1,000 a year.

Improvement in the public school system, by the carrying through of a million-dollar building and modernizing program, also gained attention, as did the grade-crossing elimination project on 30-N, on which work is scheduled to be started this year.

Representative of the 640 present membership of the Chamber of Commerce, and summarizing a year of gratifying accomplishments for Mansfield, it is satisfying to the people of this community to realize that such a civic association is in constant touch with widely varied local activities having to do with the general welfare: that its leadership is such as to inspire confidence, and that the same elements which have contributed to progress thus far made can be depended upon to continue into the future with the same intelligence, earnestness and energy that have heretofore been evidenced.

No better summarizing of last night's meeting could be given than the expression which closed the short talk given by A. W. Robertson, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the board of Westinghouse: "I am leaving this meeting with a stronger feeling that all is well with the world than I ever before have had."

Distribution of Unused Land

HERBERT HOOVER, who a quarter of a century ago was feeding the Belgians, now has a congenial job dispersing civilian supplies to the Finns. That is important, and there is no telling how long his services will be needed there or in neighboring countries.

But Hugh Johnson suggests a far bigger job for him, when the present war has proceeded a little farther and the nations of the world have done some constructive thinking about the basic problems involved and the possible remedies for them.

The great need of quarreling nations crowded together in central and western Europe is land, space to move around on and soil from which to get a living. Land with a tolerable climate and mineral resources. There must be a great deal of such land still left in the world. Africa and South America and the South Seas have enormous spaces livable for white men and now almost empty.

Britain and France alone, if they were willing, might supply enough such land to ease Europe's population pressure and provide a new deal for everybody willing to accept such an opportunity.

Don't Underestimate Intelligence

A PROFESSOR of business and economics who has associated with, and studied on the job, all sorts of workmen, says the most common mistake made in studying mass-production workers is in underestimating their intelligence.

"Some surprisingly smart men are found engaged in semi-skilled or unskilled work," he says. "While there are wide variations in this respect, and while most of the men are comparatively ignorant, in general their basic intellectual capacity is quite as high as that found in other walks of life.

"This represents some waste of brain power, just as the presence in college classes of men unsuited for study represents a waste of educational effort."

Many observant people have probably noticed the same thing and reached the same conclusion about workingmen in general. Those in the skilled trades probably have brighter minds, as a rule, than the unskilled. The chief difference, perhaps, between hand-workers and so-called brain-workers, is usually one of language. Those with more education have learned to express themselves better and argue more cleverly. But in basic intelligence there may be very little difference. Sometimes the advantage may run the other way.

Many educated people seem to be fooled by words and deceived by fluent speech, while an ungrammatical mechanic, slow of speech, may see more clearly and come to a sounder conclusion.

What the War's About

A CLEAR statement of what the western democracies of Europe are fighting for comes from John W. Wheeler-Bennett, member of the Royal Institute of National Affairs in London, who is now in America. He says:

"We are at war to destroy that aggressive, bullying spirit of the enemy, to defend the empire, to restore the wrongs done to Austria, Czechoslovakia and Poland, and above all to vindicate the fundamentals of our faith—our individual freedoms.

"In a sense, this is a war for the liberation of the German people from the pagan cruelty, wanton mockery and dissimulation of a gangster clique."

People who "pay as they go" may not go so far, but it's easier coming back.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—These are strange days on Broadway. Dorothy Lamour goes on a "mercy" expedition in New York harbor, feeding ducks that are starving on the ice. But they can't find the ducks and the ice at the same time. . . .

You walk down the street and you come to a revolving door, and you see a man standing near it in a uniform, playing doorman for a living. He is Jack Renault, the famous old Canadian pugilist. Jack fought all the good ones, and he earned nearly $150,000 in his fighting days. But it is gone now, and today he stands on the curb in an Admiral's braid, swinging doors for Tom, Dick and Harry as they hurry by, never realizing that here is a man who once came very near to ring-greatness.

THERE are no longer any girly shows on Broadway — well, maybe one or two small ones. But the Paradise, the French Casino, the Hollywood, the International — all are gone. Closed. Bankrupt, mostly. It is the last gasp of a way of life that has been dying for two years. For ten years. Maybe ever since Ziegfeld died. I think the producers have only themselves to blame. Year in and day out it was the same old thing, the same old line of dimpled knees with a splash of white showing between black stockings and lace panties. Even Broadway, it seems, can tire of dimples. If the showmen had shown more showmanship, if they had tried something for themselves instead of wearing out an old bygone method of adolescent hip-dip, all those kids wouldn't be walking Broadway today, searching for jobs that aren't there. Beauty in panties no longer is enough. The red ink on the ledgers is proof of this.

IT'S like this. You are just walking along the street, and you meet people, and they tell you things.

Here is Marjorie Anderson, who plays in "The Shadow," and she tells of the girl advertising solicitor on Broadway who was rushed to a hospital when a mad dog bit her.

While the antirabies serum was being prepared the doctor noticed that she was writing down a lot of names.

"Say," he said soothingly, "you don't have to notify your relatives. You'll pull through."

"Oh, these aren't relatives," she said. "This is just a list of people I'm going to bite if I go mad."

That word mad makes me think of Hedy Lamarr. When she came to NY her agents arranged for a quorum of photographers to meet the beauty at her hotel. But a half hour before the scheduled meeting the maid began making frantic telephone calls. "Miss Lamarr is so distressed," she said. "But it's her throat—it's laryngitis or something worse. She can't talk. She is in great pain. She is so sorry."

A few hours later a couple of the boys ran into this ecstacy lass in the Cotton Club, just having a jim dandy time and feeling no pain whatever. It was a remarkable recovery, they agree. One of the fastest on record. And were her agents mad!

Another Deadlock On the Western Front!

Proposes Real Aid to Finland

By HARVEY L. LUTZ
Professor of Public Finance, Princeton University.

It is agreed on all sides that Finland's great need, in order to resist Russian aggression, is for war materials, especially airplanes and anti-aircraft guns.

Because this is so generally recognized, the feeble proposal made by the President that Congress should vote a Finnish loan, but should restrict use of the money to the purchase of non-military supplies is a great disappointment. It suggests the final and complete bankruptcy of our foreign policy.

It is as impossible to fathom the reasons for this official "pussy-footing" about Finland as it is to defend it. On a coldblooded business basis, the one nation in Europe that is entitled to a good credit rating in this country is Finland.

Every school child knows the reason for this. But the antipathy to giving prompt, effective support to Finland does not rest on cool, cautious calculation of the chances that the loan may not be repaid. In so far as there are discernible reasons, they rest on fear rather than on rational analysis of the loan prospects.

And what is this fear? It must be a fear of one of two things. The first is that such action would offend Russia, and the second is that it would tend to involve the United States in a general European war. Neither of these things makes sense.

With respect to Russia's attitude or feelings, the obvious answer is that her attack on Finland is an undeclared and wholly unwarranted war of aggression. It reveals the true character of the bloody autocrats whose regime was recognized by the United States a few years ago.

The attack on Finland is in part our responsibility, for the recognition of Russia was followed by a stream of American engineers, technicians and machinery into Russia. At the time it was supposed that this generous provision of our technical skill and resources would hasten the increase of production and the elevation of living standards for the Russian people. Disillusionment has come slowly, but now even the most hardened "liberals" are beginning to admit their error. It is clear that the principal service of these experts was to contribute, unintentionally, to the creation of an aggressive war machine.

Without that aid to Russia, there would be today far fewer airplanes and tanks for a mass invasion of Finland. In the light of the record, substantial aid to Finland becomes a moral obligation, in order to undo, or at least to offset, the consequences of misguided enthusiasm for the new Russian order, and gullible acceptance of the assurances that Russia had no aggressive designs in Europe.

There is no basis for concern that aid to Finland means, inevitably, our being drawn into war with other countries. What other countries? The only conceivable opponent would be Germany. But Germany is not at war with Finland, nor has she begun aggressive acts without the formality of declaring war. England and France have already taken steps to supply substantial aid, and they would not attack us for doing the same.

Germany's only real basis for opposing our assistance to Finland is that it would conserve English and French resources. But this objection would also hold against private American aid to the Finns. By such logic, Mr. Hoover's efforts to help the Finnish people are, indirectly, an act unfriendly to Germany. Mr. Roosevelt's own feeble proposal is likewise offensive to the Nazis by the same reasoning.

As a matter of fact, there is nothing to be afraid of in this case. There will be much to be ashamed of, beside the knowledge of our craven fears, if, after having helped to create the Russian war machine, we do not also help the one small European nation that above all others deserves American support in her hour of need, if she is not to be crushed by that machine.

Listen, World!

We'll Awake.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

A TERRIFIED CHILD, crouching in a hide-out for hours, watching his wastrel father's life drip away through a sieve of bullet holes.

A swaggering youth rising to gutter power . . . gutter smart and gutter cruel, yet bearing the mark of a power that no one could understand.

A full-grown hoodlum turned "honest"—maybe! Wholesaling liquor "straight." "Guv-ment seals 'n' evert'ing, Munsie! Get me. Evert'ing straight. But not too straight, heh, Munsie . . . not so straight* I can't see 'round a corner, huh?" Then that flat quick cackle of laughter . . . that sidling look . . . the shambling walk that even the swankest tailors couldn't make seem "class."

Who'm I talking about? Robert Montgomery, of course — in the greatest thing he's ever done, his role as "The Earl of Chicago." Man! I wish I could slip that thing into the heart of every broken and branded mortal on this earth . . . every poor devil who doesn't know what he's all about—or why.

"Silky" Kilmount they called him. Why "silky"? Because he loved things soft and sleek . . . plush curtains . . . velvet frames . . . bronze that flowed like living, lovely flesh beneath his flickering fingers.

But where should a gutter rat get that love of fineness? Why should a gutter rat get such a kick outta courage — an' him going putty-pale at the sight of a gun? And that line he threw about being honest—with the crookedness sticking outta his very ears! Goofy, that's what he was. Plain screwball, though smart as hell. What was the answer? His mob didn't know. And neither did "Silky," though he never let on.

But perhaps the answer lay in those papers—those cockeyed papers that proved "Silky" was a long-lost English Earl—and sent him battin' across the ocean after that mess o' money. Not interested—really—just going back because he had to. Back to the splendid old halls of his fathers . . . and the lovely old earth . . . and the simple, kindly folk who'd served his people for over 40 years . . . and the gallant deeds they all took as a matter of course.

A Guttersnipe in the House of Lords! A hoodlum sweating in ermine, blundering through old rituals—it didn't add up right. No wonder things began to mutter and move in him, twist and tighten about his dizzy brain . . . 'til at last the craziness of it all proved too much for him . . . and he stood with a smoking gun in his hand . . . and the man who had "ratted on him" dead at his feet.

The end of "Silky" Kilmount. End of a show-off, coward and cad. So they thought — as he waited — droning through the dreadful "Judgment of his Peers" . . . damning him to die. But they were wrong. "Silky" Kilmount might be on his way out but the soul that had bided its time in his shamed, bewildered flesh was just waking.

Breathless you watch it wake —as the one man who loves him dresses him for his hanging. See the sense come back to the shifty eyes . . . and the pride return to the drooping shoulders . . . and the courage he'd never known in all his beaten and brutal days flood his veins.

AS THE EARL OF GORLEY WALKS STRAIGHT AND FREE TO THE DEATH THAT WILL BE A BEGINNING!

And watching him go, I thought of you and me, and this muddled dream through which we too grope our dazed way. And it came to me—sure—that some day we too will wake and feel the old self, the true self rising in us as we've felt it stirring, dimly, all along. It won't be the Earl of Gorley that will rise with that waking—for few of us are heirs to ancient blood. But we're heirs to something older, something finer.

We're the heirs of God, his children. And His glory and power and love. And no matter how badly we're muddled the trail, we'll awake on that day, as His SONS!

It Does Pay Sometimes.

Now that Al Capone is out where a process server legally can reach him, the Government will file a civil action for that $350,000 in unpaid income taxes.

Broken in health and spirit though he may be, this bizarre American product remains a living mockery of our insistence that crime doesn't pay. In money, it paid him right royally. Few of our contemporaries number among their several residences a luxurious estate in Florida, a show-place often pictured in popular periodicals or display so many other evidences of affluence to solace their declining years. The pledge itself of owing $350,000 in income taxes is not given to many, and how it came to Al Capone is well enough known.

No longer a menace he remains a national liability and we hope the government will collect that $350,000 every penny of it. It represents little enough of what this gentleman owes society.—Detroit News.

Summary of Week's Happenings

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

AT CHICAGO'S first national political convention, in 1860, the upstart Republican party nominated Abraham Lincoln. He won, and so did nine of the 15 presidential candidates chosen there since then—including Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932.

That performance record—plus an offer of $150,000 toward convention expenses—helped Chicago this week to win its 17th presidential nominating conclave. The Democratic National committee, in session at Washington on Monday, voted 48 for the prairie metropolis to 38 for Philadelphia, seven for San Francisco, two for Houston, Tex.

Next week the Republicans will select their convention city. And Chicago is bidding for that, too.

'Road to Recovery.'

Neither party has yet set its convention date. Traditionally, the Democrats out-wait the Republicans. To retain that strategic advantage, the Democratic committeemen ducked a date decision Monday and left that to National Chairman James A. Farley.

"I have no great apprehension as to the result of the forthcoming election," he told the party leaders. "Until or unless the Republicans are able to formulate a better program to take the place of our program, I do not think there is any danger of the voters . . . consenting to any interruption of the course that has brought us so far on the road to recovery."

The president, in a press conference at his Hyde Park home that day, sang a similar tune. Citing a 70% jump in national income from $40,000,000,000 in 1932 to $68,000,000,000 in 1939, he challenged anyone to show the country is "bust."

Primary Preparations.

Grinning, the Hyde Park squire also told reporters he was getting tired of dodging their attempts to smoke him out on whether he would seek a third term. When there's anything to say about that, he promised, it will be said at a time of his choosing.

Third-term talk, nevertheless, pervaded off-the-record discussion among the party chiefs in Washington. Only last week-end petitions had been filed to enter Mr. Roosevelt in the Illinois presidential preference primary April 9.

Vice President Garner, praised by Farley as a "sturdy, stalwart" Democrat, wired thanks to Wisconsin friends who informed him a complete slate of 24 delegates supporting him for the presidency would be entered in that state's preferential primary April 2.

At Home

Uncle Sam vs. Builders.

The Sherman anti-trust law of 1890 prohibits combinations in restraint of interstate trade. Now federal trust-busters are using that law to beat down the high cost of building. And among 400 persons and organizations recently indicted in a dozen cities are 35 AFL labor unions and many of their officers.

In Miami, this week, AFL's executive committee called the campaign a "deliberate . . . drive to place organized labor under the thumb of the federal government." In Pittsburgh, next day, a federal judge imposed fines totaling $54,150 on 42 contractors, 13 corporations and two AFL union leaders charged with collusive bidding on public works. All had pleaded no defense.

"The ranks of labor," the prosecutor subsequently declared, "have been invaded by men who would do credit to Mr. Stalin or Mr. Hitler. . . . Neither the CIO nor the AFL will do anything about it."

Weeding Out the Weak.

In 1933, during the national banking crisis, congress set up the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to insure bank depositors up to $5,000 apiece. Since then, 1,569 insured banks have closed or been merged, and FDIC has repaid 877,223 deporitors 97.4% of their $294,658,000. "Disbursements during 1939," the corporation reported this week, "brought the program of rehabilitation of known problem banks near completion. The few such cases remaining . . . should be corrected during the early months of 1940."

Blood Substitute.

Doctors still have trouble getting blood for transfusion in emergency cases: The right "type" must be found, and only a limited amount can be readily transfused. Now three Chicago physicians report that blood serum seems a suitable substitute. Serum is the clear part of blood, with fibrin and corpuscles removed. It can be stored easily, doesn't have to be "typed" and can be transfused in large quantities.

Election Returns.

Voters in the Greenwich Village district of New York City elected a successor last Tuesday to the late Congressman William I. Sirovich. He's M. Michael Edelstein, a Tammany Democrat, who ran 2-to-1 ahead of Republican Louis J. Lefkowitz, who ran 2-to-1 ahead of Communist Earl Browder, who recently was sentenced to four years in federal prison for passport fraud.

In Ohio, same day, more Republicans than Democrats voted in special primaries to nominate candidates for two congressional vacancies. Final opponents, Feb. 27, will be: Byron B. Ashbrook (D) vs. J. Harry McGregor (R); and Anthony A. Fleger (D) vs. Mrs. Frances P. Bolton (R), widow of the man she's running to succeed.

Abroad

Didn't Choose to Run.

A rebellion led by the Irish Republican Army failed to chase British authorities from Ireland during Easter week, 1916. By 1922, however, London was glad to grant southern Ireland more freedom. IRA then campaigned to oust British influence from the entire island. In 1931 it was outlawed—but didn't disband. And last year it was blamed on 291 bomb explosions in England.

Two IRAmen were sentenced to hang for five deaths resulting from one of those bombings. Mercy pleas poured in from Ireland, as the deadline neared, and more time-bombs popped in British mailbags. But last Wednesday morning, at Birmingham, the executions were carried out on schedule. A last-minute reprieve. British official circles explained afterward, would have suggested that "His Majesty's government was on the run."

In France, that same day, an Alsatian autonomy leader, Dr. Karl Roos, was shot for spying. He was charged with tipping off Germany to French troop moves while Hitler was making his pre-war territorial grabs.

Dutch Switch.

Four days before Germans invaded Poland, Gen. I. H. Reynders, army chief of staff, was boosted to supreme command of Netherlands land and sea forces. He favored subordinating civil to military authority, and proceeded to spend $900,000 a day on defense. Thrifty Dutch democrats criticized both his theory and practice.

This week, because of differences with the government over "problems of military policy," Gen. Reynders resigned. Some Amsterdam newsmen wondered whether his successor would get along any better. He's square-jawed, hard-boiled, strong-willed Gen. Henri G. Winkelman, 64, who's been in charge of air defenses around Utrecht.

Quotes

Poultney Bigelow, American friend of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm: "Germany is twice as strong as she was in 1914 and is turning out arms and ammunition to beat the band."

Jeanette Rankin, first woman congressman: "There is nothing in the world situation that requires giving American people cannon instead of bread."

People

Sleuth Dies In Jail.

In 44 years as a New Jersey detective, Ellis H. Parker sent more than 300 criminals to jail or death. Four years ago he won a three-day stay of execution for Bruno Hauptmann, convicted of the Lindbergh kidnaping, by producing a "confession" from one Paul H. Wendel. When that was repudiated, Parker and his son were convicted of kidnaping Wendel and torturing him to confess falsely. This week, in a federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa., the aging sleuth died. His lawyer sought a posthumous presidential pardon.

Testament.

J. Harvey Gravell, of Ambler, Pa., made millions manufacturing paint. One Christmas he gave his men $100,000 to pay their debts. Another time he gave their wives $300 apiece for being good homemakers. And his will, opened this week, named 15 key employes heirs to his $3,000,000 business. "My wife and I always wanted to travel," one remarked. "The only trouble is to get the time off."

Tailors' Choice.

The Merchant Tailors and Designers Association, in convention at Cleveland this week, issued its annual list of the nation's best-dressed men. Among them: Democrat Paul V. McNutt and Republican Thomas E. Dewey, "probably the best . . . in the political arena;" William McChesney Martin, New York Stock Exchange president, "a model of correct conservativeness."

Captain's Error.

Mistaking a radio drama for the real thing, Capt. Byron C. Brown, of Edgartown, Mass., a retired army man, phoned the Coast Guard he'd heard an SOS from a ship in distress. When the resulting search proved a wild-goose chase, Capt. Brown was charged with drunkenness. Fined $15, this week, he appealed.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Tell It to the Marines."

At first thought, "Tell it to the marines'" would seem to be a typical American colloquialism.

So much for first thoughts; for the fact is that it is of British origin.

The allusion is to the antipathy prevailing at the time the expression gained currency, between the sea-soldiers known as marines and regular sailors, the former being contemptuously considered by the latter so gullible that they would believe any tale, no matter how extravagant.

The earliest appearance of the line in literature is in Sir Walter Scott's Redgauntlet, published in 1824, in the sentence:

"Tell that to the marines, the sailors won't believe it."

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

What Is Heroism?

There are small, poignant moments that
We meet in every day,
That call for higher courage than
A battle's grim array.

We all meet firing lines as stark
As those beneath great guns.
And this we know, the impulse of
The cowardice that runs,

That will not face the moment's test,
Oh, to be brake, to stand
Firm in such times and unafraid,
Completely in command.

Six errors ranging up to 12 votes each in the tabulation of votes cast Tuesday in the special 17th district congressional election had been uncovered today in the offical count made by the Richland county board of elections.

The largest error was in the tabulation of Ben A. Arneson's vote on the Democratic ticket. His total increased from 1,581 to 1,593 in the official count.

Col. Oliver H. Dockery, jr., Republican candidate, lost nine votes and J. Harry McGregor, winner on the Republican ticket, gained nine votes. Walter B. Woodward of Bellville, the third Republican candidate, lost three votes.

"Broadway Melody."

African Setting.

An African interior village, a seaport, and a medical research compound, surrounded by jungle, provided authentic scenes for "Congo Maisie," featuring Ann Sothern and John Carroll which is playing at the Madison theater. The story presents Maisie as she first meets a bitter doctor on a Congo river boat, when she is stranded. Complications arise with the natives and it is only Maisie who can solve the problems. She not only wins the doctor, portrayed by Carroll but she also takes the natives into her camp with her singing and card tricks that impress them as magic. "Invisible Stripes," with George Raft, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Humphrey Bogart and many others, is the second feature.

"Hollywood Cavalcade."

The Hardy Family takes a fling at life, both romantic and dramatic, in the seventh of the popular series "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," which opens Sunday at the Majestic theater. Lewis Stone as the Judge, Mickey Rooney as Andy, and Cecilia Parker as Marion, fall victims to a spirit of caprice and it is up to Fay Holden as Mother Hardy to stabilize the family. Newcomers to the cast are Helen Gilbert, who plays Andy's new love and Terry Kilburn, who recently scored a hit in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." "Within the Law," starring Ruth Hussey, Paul Kelly, Rita Johnson and William Gargan, is the second feature.

"Mr. Smith to Washington."

SOCIETY & CLUBS

MRS. FOX PRESENTS PROGRAM BEFORE CLUB

Tells Members of Review of Reviews Group About "Obscure Wives"; Hostess' Daughter Gives Piano Numbers.

FRIDAY is not a commonly chosen day for meetings of Mansfield clubs, but yesterday was the exception which proves that well-known rule, as many groups were in session. Several of the study units had meetings of interest.

The home of Mrs. F. H. McDowell, 147 Bartley avenue, was opened to members of the Review of Reviews club last night for their regular monthly meeting. Mrs H. W. Fox had the paper entitled "Obscure Wives." In this she told of the influence that such women as Mrs. Einstein, Mrs. Stalin, Mrs. Chamberlain and Mrs. Mussolini had on their husbands even though their names rarely appear in print.

Following the routine business meeting and roll call, refreshments were served at small tables. Valentine place cards were used to mark the places. Members of the club will meet again March 8 with Mrs. Everett Tingley as hostess. Mrs. Robert Barker will have the program.

Barbara McDowell, daughter of the hostess, played two preludes by Chopin and the "Scarf Dance" by Chaminade during the evening for the study club members.

Kid Party Event for Members of Mansfield Unit

A kid party was held last evening by members of Omega Tau Gamma when Mrs. William Maglott, 33 Chilton avenue, entertained at her home. During the brief business meeting the club calendar was arranged for the remainder of the year, and secret pals were chosen.

Bridge and pinochle were played with prizes being won by Miss Marjorie Crider, Mrs. Norval Bower and Mrs. Karl D. Seymour. Following the games Mrs. Seymour played several piano numbers and Mrs. Paul C. Woodhull gave a reading.

Valentine appointments were used on the small tables when the hostess served a two-course luncheon. Plans for the pledging ceremonies, which will be conducted at the next meeting, were discussed.

Bethany Class Elects Hostess as President

Members of the Bethany class of Mansfield Gospel Center elected their hostess, Mrs. Edward Thomas, Acker drive, president of the group when she entertained last night. BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN TO COVER IT

The great pioneer bridge authority, Wilbur C. Whitehead, used to give his pupils a simple rule for their guidance regarding covering an honor, something which whist players used to do almost blindly as a matter of policy. His rule was this: "Cover an honor with an honor when doing so seems likely to promote a trick in your own or partner's hand." That usually meant when you had a lower honor, too, or reckoned your partner as likely to have one.

North: ♠9 4 ♥K 8 3 2 ♦A K Q 8 3 ♣5 2
West: ♠A Q 8 5 3 ♥7 6 5 ♦9 7 5 ♣10 3
East: ♠J 6 2 ♥A ♦10 4 ♣K J 9 8 7 6 4
South: ♠K 10 7 ♥Q J 10 9 4 ♦J 6 2 ♣A Q

(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

After South's 1-Heart on this duplicate deal, West made a pretty risky overcall of 1-Spade, something he would not have tried in a rubber game, in which the punishment might be too costly. North jumped to 3-Hearts. South bid 4-Hearts and then East sacrificed at 4-Spades.

The defenders took the diamond K, club Q, diamond Q, club A, and led a third diamond, which dummy ruffed with the 2. The spade J was led and, when South played the 7, West let the J win. The spade Q finesse worked next, the A dropped the K, the heart A was used as an entry, and the clubs were run. Thus the side was down only one trick.

South definitely should have covered the spade J with the K, because by so doing he might set up a trick for himself, his 10. That is exactly what he would have done, and the contract would have been set two tricks instead of one.

GIRL AT THE FRONT + + + + +

By ROB EDEN

CHAPTER XXII

Lili laughed, her pale cheeks showing the trace of a dimple that might have been charming if she had not been so thin.

"There is another way out," she said. "A way we have used before. The roof."

Frau Weber supervised replacing the bandage on Cameron's foot.

"You must take your crutches, too," she advised. "A crippled man in uniform will attract little or no attention, and the fraulein will be taken for a friend or a relative, helping the injured soldier along."

While she was talking, Lili had been getting an ironing board from the kitchen. At first glance it appeared like any other board but to the astonishment of the Americans, she opened it out to twice its regular size. It really was two boards, cleverly tooled to fit into each other.

"When it's opened out it locks together," she explained, "making it twice as long—long enough for our purpose, and strong enough to hold a heavy man."

Frau Weber carefully explained what they were to do when they crossed over to the roof of the next building.

"On the far side there is a stairway," she said. "It will bring you out in the next street and if as I suspect, there are guards in the alleyway below our place, they'll never see you. If you should see any one in the street, wait until they're out of sight. Fraulein Dietrich knows which bus to take—Number 57. It will land you at Pichelsdorf in about an hour and if you are careful you may not be noticed."

"How do we know a plane will come for us?" Claire asked.

"You don't. It's the only chance you have to escape, though and I'm sure your friend will be there soon. The message went through. I checked on that. Your friend will be there if—if he's still alive."

* * *

"I don't know what I'd have done if you hadn't given me shelter," he said. "You're a brave woman, Frau Weber. I hope to meet you again under happier circumstances."

The woman kissed Claire, and then told Lili it was time to go. The girl had slipped quietly out the front door a few minutes before and listened outside. She also had made sure the stairway was clear, returning as silently as she had gone.

[illegible] her mother's words, she picked up the ironing board that could be extended to nearly twice its length and put it under her arm. "[illegible]," she said. "We're [illegible]."

Frau Weber turned out the light before opening the door, and the three of them slipped out into the darkness, Cameron carrying his crutches and Claire holding the bag of food the woman had given her.

* * *

Lili tiptoed along the corridor, and slowly started up the stairs. At each landing she whispered for the other two to wait in the shadows while she scouted to make sure they would encounter no one. At last they reached the roof, over the fourth floor and, guided by Lili who held Cameron's hand while he in turn clasped Claire's, they crept to the far edge.

"Now," Lili whispered, "if you'll put down your crutches and help me open out the board."

Cameron did as she told him, and with her carried the board to the coping around the roof top. He steadied it as she pushed and in a few moments, he felt it firm beneath the pressure of his hands.

"Good," the girl said. "It's in place. When you both get safely across, raise the end and push it to the edge. I can draw it back to this side."

"I'll go first," Cameron whispered. He found Lili's hand in the darkness and shook it as he voiced his thanks.

Slowly he edged his way across the board carrying the bag of food. When he was across Lili slid the crutches out on the board, he reached them and drew them over. Then when Claire was ready he held out the crutches to her and she grasped the end of each.

"I hope all this terrible business soon ends," Claire paused to say to Lili, "and you will have your Freddie back again safe and sound."

When Claire was safely across, Cameron [illegible] board as Lili [illegible] while she drew it back.

"All right," [illegible] finally and Bill and Claire collected the crutches and the bundle and started hunting for the stairway. There was a faint glow from the stars but otherwise Berlin was entirely shrouded in darkness. As they felt their way carefully about the roof it seemed hours to Claire before they located the steps leading down.

Bill led the way, his crutches held in a position for instant defense if they should meet any one. But their luck held and they made their way to the street without interference. They had seen faint edges of light under several doors as they passed along the corridors from one flight of stairs to the next but no one had appeared to challenge them.

While Claire crouched in the entrance to the flat building Cameron adjusted his crutches and hobbled slowly out to reconnoiter. He was back in a few minutes without having seen or heard anything, so they started, the girl touching his arm as he made his way slowly along with the aid of the crutches. His bandaged foot he carefully held up from the pavement.

At last they reached the corner where Frau Weber had told them their bus would stop, and settled down to wait. Claire glanced at her watch, and by the radium tinted numerals saw that it was eleven-thirty. They had delayed longer and taken much more time than she had imagined.

"No use waiting for a bus now," she said. "I'm sure they don't run at night, at least not this late. They're not permitted to have lights."

"Where can we go? We can't sit out here all night—it's too cold for you."

"I can stand the cold, Bill, but I'm afraid there's too much danger of an officer coming along and questioning us. Perhaps we'd better get off the street."

* * *

She had looked around carefully when she arrived in Berlin on the bus, and remembered a building close by which might offer shelter. Holding Cameron's arm while he hobbled along, she guided him there. The front doors were locked but there was a deep recess at one side of the entrance and Claire drew her companion into it.

"At any rate, we'll be out of the cold wind here," she said, "and unless a brown shirt comes along with a flashlight, we're reasonably safe."

"If he does I'll crack him over the head with a crutch," Cameron threatened.

Fortunately for the brown shirts and for the fugitives, no one did bother them, and Claire was even able to get a little sleep crouched on the marble floor of the entrance, leaning against Cameron's knees. He stood over her, alert, prepared to put up a fight if they were surprised.

At the first streak of daylight he awakened her and they moved back toward the bus stop. At Claire's suggestion, they did not go to the little island in the middle of the street but waited in a doorway. When she saw a bus approaching they hurried across the street. It was the wrong bus but Number 57 came along right after, and they climbed aboard.

Claire recognized the old driver as the same one with whom she had ridden into the city but there was no light of recognition in the man's dull eyes as he exclaimed, "Heil Hitler!" in a flat voice and extended his right arm upward in salute. They obediently heiled back and the driver clucked sympathetically as he noted Cameron's bandaged foot and crutches.

"Pichelsdorf," Claire said, and proffered money for the fare. The man made the change, and then the bus lurched off as he shifted gears.

Claire and Bill took seats at the rear of the clumsy vehicle where there was a door marked "Emergency Exit."

"If we have any trouble," Cameron whispered, "We'll go out this door and make a run for it." Claire nodded.

The ride, however, was without incident. Only two other passengers got on and they had the bus virtually to themselves as they rode along in the gray early morning light.

The sun was just coming up over the horizon when they stepped down from the bus. Much to their relief, they saw that the road was clear except for the vehicle. Claire recognized the woods, and after a short search found the path over which she had walked before.

They had no more than reached the first fringe of trees, still within hearing of the main road, when they heard the roar of motors and hastily concealed themselves.

"Just in time," Cameron breathed, peering out through the underbrush. "It's a patrol on motorcycles." The patrol sped down the road, and as the fugitives watched they saw it stop the lumbering bus, now nearly a mile down the road. A few minutes later the vehicle moved on, the men returned to their motorcycles, remounted, and the whole troop sped onward—away from the woods.

"What a break!" Bill mopped his forehead with his sleeve. "If they had caught up with the bus five minutes sooner, or if they had asked the driver any questions, we'd really be in spot now."

"I hope our luck holds," Claire said. Soon she located the winding path which she knew would lead them to the clearing where Rene Martin had landed.

"How long do you think it will be before Rene shows up?" she asked as they walked along.

"You've got me there. I have no more idea than you have—but I hope it's soon. It's not going to be much fun dodging around behind these trees with the chance of a Nazi popping out at us, a gun aimed at our heads."

"But you're certain he will come?" A note of fear appeared in Claire's voice despite her efforts to hide it.

"Of course, dear. He won't fail us." Claire didn't know he added the words, "I hope," to himself. Looking up into his confident smiling face she took new hope.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"You know as well as I that you won't be," I told her with emphasis, "but let's suppose, for the sake of the argument, that your gloomy prediction comes true, and you are—for the few minutes that will elapse before you jump into the rendition in which I have drilled you. Then— I'll stake anything on it—the tables will be so gloriously turned that I'm only afraid your head will follow them. Your father-in-law himself will be the first to acclaim you, and all the rest of them, including Olina, will follow suit. I can hardly wait for the hour to come, the hour of your triumph which you so richly deserve."

"I wish I had half your optimism," Mary retorted.

"You have, if you'll only let it come to the surface, instead of smothering it under a layer of doubts," I said, then added with a purposeful touch of impatience: "But I can't spend time on a hypothetical question just now. I have something more important to decide."

"I'm sorry," she began uncertainly, with the question in her voice which she did not dare to ask.

"Don't waste time on regrets," I told her sententiously. "Just gird yourself for what's ahead of you tomorrow. And I'm afraid I must subject you to a small preliminary ordeal today."

Mary's head went up as if I had pricked her flesh with a stiletto. But I did not wait for her to speak.

"I had intended to keep you out of sight when your father-in-law came today," I said, "and have Olina go through her lines with me cueing her. But, after all, Philip Veritzen is producing this play, and he ought to sit in on any innovation except, of course, the big one we're springing tomorrow. Because of this I'm going to ask you to go through the scene with Olina for your father-in-law's benefit."

"It will be a nauseous pill," she told me, smiling faintly, "but I'll try to swallow it without choking."

"That's my own brave girl," I commended, "and I'm sure you know I wouldn't ask the effort of you if I didn't deem it vital to our scheme. But I want to watch your father-in-law very closely while you go through the new lines to which you've given the stilted rendition of the others which he taught you. I'm fervently hoping that he doesn't 'smell two-tree mice,' as Katie puts it."

Mary laughed, but her mirth had a hollow sound.

"I shall echo your prayers," she said despondently.

"Don't take it so seriously!" I chided her, "and don't worry! When Veritzen has gone and you've had a breathing spell, I'm going to town with you—on your last rehearsal. That's the thing for which I want you to key yourself up, not this session with your father-in-law."

"I suppose before I 'key myself up,' you want me to 'let myself down'," Mary gibed.

"You are eminently correct," I told her, smiling. "Right now, I prescribe—"

"No naps please," she said quickly. "I simply can't take one now. I've got a brand new detective mystery, and I want to dive into it head first."

"That's what I was going to prescribe," I said, as I moved toward the door. But Mary stopped me with an enthusiastic hug.

"You understanding soul!" she said. "Why don't you take a dose of your own medicine? Here!" She thrust a book into my hand. "This is tops. I prescribe it."

Light-Hitting Godoy Earns Another Bout With Louis

Godoy Crowds Louis to Ropes In Title Bout

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK—(AP)—The fight world today held a morning-after head, and through it buzzed the name of Arturo Godoy, the strange interlude in the life of Joe Louis.

For 15 mauling, bruising rounds last night the hot tamale from Chile stood up to the Brown Bomber, and when the announcer intoned "The winner, and still world champion . . .," a thunder of booes swept from the Madison Square Garden rafters.

* * * * *

It was that close in the eyes of many of the 15,675 fans who came expecting another efficient Louis' painting job and left with vague misgivings.

* * * * *

They couldn't figure out whether the Bomber was no longer the same Bomber who wrecked the John Henry Lewises and the Max Schmelings and the Tony Galentoes, or whether the clowning, grimacing, bobbing and clutching Godoy was more than a little better than they figured

This they did know, that a return meeting in the open air next summer is as certain as death. Arturo can't punch a lick, but he punched his way right out of the garden into the open air.

Not only the gallery thought the rock-ribbed, iron-jawed Chilean was the victor Tommy Shortell, one of the judges, gave Godoy the fight with 10 rounds to five for Louis. Referee Arthur Donovan gave Louis 10 and Godoy five, the same as the Associated Press score sheet, and the other judge, George Lecron, gave Louis 10, Godoy four, and called one even.

Sharper, more punishing blows provided the margin by which the Bomber retained his title. He was up against a style that baffled him, and left him puzzled and frustrated as he tried to find a spot for his famed dynamite fists on a crouching, bobbing foe who came out for the first round squatting like a Russian dancer, dove for his opponent's thighs, then crept upward like ivy until he could bury his square chin in the hollow of Louis' neck and whale away.

Louis, little relishing the inside work, did his best to stay clear, but his straight left wasn't enough to keep the courageous Chilean away. Even Joe's uppercuts, landing soddenly on Godoy's battle-scarred face, failed to slow Godoy more than momentarily.

In fact, Joe's week-end punches bounced off him like rain off a tin roof, and he was forever swarming, swarming. In several rounds, he carried Louis against the ropes and silently challenged him to a head-to-head slugging bee from which he seldom came off second best.

Time after time, the Garden was a bedlam as the unorthodox Chilean bulled the sloe-eyed champion about, often making him blink with looping lefts or rights which, had they the potency of a Galento punch, would have spelled disaster.

Godoy appeared to tire midway in the fight, but he got his second wind quickly, and in the closing rounds he appeared strong. In fact, he provided a clownish interlude in the 14th, coming out of his corner gorilla fashion, stooped over, arms drooped to floor.

Abruptly he stood erect and began dancing about Louis in a huge circle, as the champion, a statue in bronze, pivoted like a mannikin in midring and waited for his taunting foe to lead.

* * * * *

All in all, Louis won, and in our opinion, won by a clear margin, but it was Godoy's night to howl, which he did literally when he realized he had stayed 15 rounds with the Dark Destiny and had carried the fight to his opponent over the route.

* * * * *

It was Louis' ninth title defense and the second time he was carried the limit. Tommy Farr was the other survivor

Bill Hipp Rolls 277 Game In Moose Loop

Young Lodge League Bowler Needed Big Score To Hit 600 on Nose.

BILL HIPP missed the "300 circle" by just 23 pins at the Meder alleys last night.

Rolling with the No. 3 team in the Moose Home league, young Hipp produced a spectacular 277 game to hold the spotlight at the Meder lanes last night. His 277 tilt followed two ordinary games of 166 and 157, and he needed the big score to hit 600 right on the nose.

Opening with a 204 and 213, Babe Meder rolled a 604 to account for the only other 600 in the league last night.

* * *

Scoring honors in the Ohio Brass league were won by Michaels, 608, and Shoup, 613, of the Brass Finishing team.

Shiloh Quint Runs Streak To 10 Games

SHILOH—Riding on the crest of a 10-game winning streak, the Shiloh high Drummer Boys were ready to invade Monroeville to tackle the Monroeville high courtiers tonight.

Shiloh registered victory No. 10 by edging Plymouth, 31 to 30, in a Twin-Valley league tussle here last night.

Plymouth gave the undefeated league champions a scare after the intermission, but lacked a scoring punch.

The Drummer Boys were ahead, 17 to 13, at the rest period, when Plymouth suddenly spurted to get within a point of the lead, the third frame ending 26 to 25.

Dawson was the high-point man for the evening dumping in 11 points. Rule led the Plymouth team with nine tallies. The preliminary affair went to Plymouth, by a score of 18 to 14.

* * *

Ray Kipp Leads New Haven to Win.

NORTH FAIRFIELD—New Haven high cinched second place in the Twin-Valley league title chase here last night by stopping North Fairfield, 52 to 21.

* * *

The Yellow Jackets, who tallied nine or more points in the first three periods, climaxed their scoring with 22 markers in the final frame.

* * *

New Haven was leading, 9 to 7, in the first quarter, 19 to 9, at the half, and 30 to 11, at the end of the third chapter. Ray Kipp set the scoring pace with 21 points. New Haven won the preliminary, 32 to 24.

Tygers Hope For Easier Tilt With Shelby Tonight

Tygers Determined to Take Measure of Old Foe In Regulation Time on Home Court.

ORDINARILY an opponent with a record of only one win in 10 starts wouldn't cause much concern in Mansfield basketball circles, but experts are crossing their fingers as they name the Tygers to whip the Shelby Whippets on the west end court tonight.

On season records, Mansfield high court cavorters should romp over the Whippets with ease.

* * *

But there is that little case of a natural rivalry, and there are few deadlier foes in this section than that of Mansfield and Shelby.

Shelby would gladly accept a mediocre season to beat Mansfield and the Tygers have never enjoyed a whipping by the Whippets. This all adds up to a lot of rivalry on the floor of battle.

Mansfield was forced into an overtime period to trim the Whippets on their own floor several weeks ago, and Coach Hoffman hopes that the Tygers have not forgotten the battle.

The Tygers could have lost this game just as easily. Had Bill Daugherty not applied too much "English" to a shot on the opening play of the overtime, Shelby would have won. His shot rolled into the rim, but came right out again just as the spectators were getting ready to leave.

Hoffman has not accused his Tygers of being over-confident for the first Shelby game, but he knows definitely that they will not be in such a frame of mind tonight.

After the defeat by Ashland, another former N. C. O. conference rival, the Tygers are anxious to show that they are above that league's class of ball.

They are just as determined to show their supremacy against Ashlann next week to avenge one of five marks on their record.

Hoffman has not indicated who will be in the starting line-up tonight, but in all probability it will include Don Rose, Jack Shiplet, Russ Beer, Harry Phillips and Gene Miller.

The Tygers' big job again tonight will be to stop Bob Lehman. Shelby's high-scoring center. Lehman was limited to two field goals in their first meeting, but they are not expected to take any chances.

* * *

If they halt Lehman, the Tygers still have Daugherty and Hollenbaugh, a pair of pretty good ball players, to consider.

A preliminary game between the school's reserves will open the program at 7:15 p. m.

Whippets Drop Tilt To Galion

Shelby Bows to Orangemen, 48-42, After Fourth Period Rally Falls Short.

GALION — Shelby high broke loose with a last-period scoring spurt, but it wasn't quite enough, and dropped a thrilling 48 to 42 decision to Galion here last night in a North Central Ohio conference game.

Galion held a 35 to 21 advantage as the clubs went into the final quarter and both combines rattled the backboards consistently. The Whippets outpointed Galion 20-13 in that period.

* * *

The Orangemen, paced by Secrest, who accounted for 17 points, found the Whippets tough in the initial frame and that chapter ended with the score knotted at 9-all. Galion, however, went ahead, 20 to 17, at the intermission.

Bob Lehman, who is fighting to win the conference individual scoring championship, led the Whippets with 16 markers. The Shelby reserves defeated the Galion seconds, 27 to 18, in the preliminary.

Cuckoos are among the very few birds that will eat caterpillars. They eat so many of them that the walls of their stomachs become lined with the hairs. It is generally believed that the cuckoo builds no nests and lays its eggs in those built by other birds. However, this is true only of the European cuckoos.

Nolan Arranges 'Battle Royal' For Monday's Wrestling Show

THE wrestling "battle royal," that spectacular mat wrinkle which has become almost extinct on American wrestling pads, will be revived Monday night in the Armory.

Matchmaker Tim Nolan of the Quality club came to that decision today as a means of settling a little argument among three wrestlers.

* * *

Nolan has signed Charley Layden of Ft. Wayne, Ind., Bobby Blake of Columbus, Frank Wolfe, Australian strong man, and Larry Munro of Cicero, Ill., to appear on Monday night's show here, but so far he hasn't matched any of the four.

The argument is both Blake and Layden feel that they should be given the assignment against Wolfe in the semi-final

"I'm going to let them settle the argument among themselves by throwing all four into 'a battle royal' as the opening feature of the show," Nolan said. Then the final two men in the ring at the finish will be given a five minute rest and they'll wrestle the semi-final, a two out of three falls match with a 45 minute time limit.

* * *

"That way nobody knows who'll meet who until the 'battle royal' is over and it'll take a lot of grief off my hands besides giving the fans a treat."

The main bout of the card will send "Bull" Marino of New York City against Davey Reynolds

Overtime Win Gives Bellville Cage Title

Hamilton's Basket In Extra Period Defeats Madison, 27 to 24, on Winner's Court.

By CHARLES MARTIN

LAST FALL Howard "Tick" Hamilton did a lot of galavantin' over high school gridirons to put Bellville on the map.

Last night he turned his attention to making an important field goal in the Bellville high gymnasium and his efforts gave the once-defeated Bluejays the Richland county basketball league championship.

Hamilton, who won the state individual football scoring title in 1939, split the net for a fielder in a suicide overtime to enable Coach W. L. Miley's cagers to stop a rampaging Madison high quintet, 27 to 24, before an overflow gathering.

The combines finished the regulation game with the score deadlocked at 24-all. Hamilton pumped in a free throw and after a minute and two seconds of playing time, tallied his goal from the side.

Madison, defending champion, still had a slight chance of gaining a share of the crown and as a result turned on one of their finest performances of the season.

Both teams have a game remaining on the schedule, and had Madison upset the new champions last night, and won next week, while Bellville was dropping two, it would have shared the title.

The Rams ran wild in the second quarter to hop into the lead and the way Doug DeNero was keeping Bill Martin, star center, from locating the basket, it looked like they might squeeze out a win.

Bellville found itself on the short end of a 21-23 count as the clubs went into the final frame, but limited the visiting Rams to a point while collecting three to tie the score.

The Bluejays chalked up a 6 to 3 advantage in the initial quarter, but Mentor Al Fendrick's athletes, battling to defend the title, outscored their host, 14-5, to grab a 17 to 11 lead at the rest period.

DeNero didn't let the task of stopping Martin occupy all his time and he slipped in 14 points for high-point honors Hamilton led the winners with 10 tallies.

* * *

Madison lost the services of two regulars after the half.

Lexington Gains Share of Third.

LEXINGTON—Coach John Reese's Lexington high Minutemen climbed into a tie with Butler for third place in the Richland county league race here last night by defeating Union high, 33 to 22.

* * *

With Bill Shaffer, crack forward, pacing the attack, the Minutemen hopped into the lead in the opening frame and never trailed in registering their six league triump.

Union gave Lexington a battle for three quarters, but Lexington went on a scoring spree in the final stanza to ice the setto. It was Union's 11th defeat in 12 circuit games.

Lexington raced out in front, 13 to 6, in the first period, was leading 19 to 14, at the rest period, and held a 22 to 18 advantage as play was resumed in the fourth chapter.

* * *

Shaffer set the individual pace with 13 tallies, while Braden of Union led his teammates with seven points.

* * *

The preliminary contest between the reserves teams was a highlight of the evening. Union led, 13 to 2, at the half, but Lexington held its rival to one point and tied the score at 13-all at the gun. Then Bob Rhems, who also saw action in the varsity tilt, sank a one-hand shot in the first 15 seconds of the suicide overtime to give the junior Minutemen a 15 to 13 decision.

Federal Reserve Board Survey Shows Increase of 9 Per Cent Over Week in 1939.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Moderately mixed price changes ruled in today's stock market dealings.

Market analysts found considerable encouragement in the federal reserve board's survey of the nation's department store sales last week disclosing sharp gains over 1939 in virtually all districts. For the country as a whole the increase was estimated at 9 per cent over the like week a year ago. The expansion in the preceding two weeks amounted to 4 per cent.

Not so pleasing were reports from steel centers that the tonnage of structural metal booked so far this year is about 40 per cent under the same 1939 period. New structural business last month was placed at some 60,000 tons compared with 84,000 tons in December and 101,000 tons in the previous January. Heavy advance orders last fall, at the height of the war boom, were said to have accounted partly for the recent poor showing.

smashing Germany, before peace can be achieved.

Allies, Germany Told of Welles' Tour Earlier.

LONDON — (INS) The British government and presumably France, Germany and Italy were advised in advance of President Roosevelt's plan to send Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles to Europe, it was authoritatively disclosed today.

Britain gave its immediate approval when word came from Washington of the president's intention, it was learned, and it was assumed that France, Germany and Italy likewise sanctioned the move before official announcement of the forthcoming assignment was made.

The "deep interest and gratification" of the British government over President Roosevelt's "obvious interest" in the European situation was stressed again by an authorized spokesman.

Well-informed circles were inclined to link Welles' visit with the appointment of Myron C. Taylor as special American ambassador to the vatican and with consultations between the United States and other neutral nations.

These were looked upon as parallel moves "possibly and eventually resulting in a peace initiative."

Both Britain and France, however, made it clear in advance of Welles' arrival that the allies will not waver in their determination to remove the menace of German aggression.

Government quarters and the press emphasized that Welles will be welcomed and aided in every way possible—but he will be told there can be no peace until Naziism is eradicated and justice is done to Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Austria.

of two miles were denied in Finnish official quarters.

Not even the outlying defenses of the line have been broken, it was asserted at Helsinki, and the Finns are more confident than ever that the string of fortifications can never be smashed.

While the Russians continued their new attempt to push across the narrowest part of Finland and cut the republic in two, the Finns registered fresh gains against the spearhead of the drive, in the Kuhmo sector of the east central front.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga the Finns captured a Soviet stronghold, driving back the Russians and destroying 19 tanks. The battle there continues.

Following defeat of a Russian drive to take Hoyhenjaervi, 60 miles south of Petsamo in the extreme north, Finnish patrols moved through the Russian lines and reached Salmijaervi, nickel mining center midway between Hoyhenjaervi and Petsamo.

Three points on the Carelian isthmus bore the brunt of the relentless Soviet offensive: Summa, in the west, Punnusjoki, in the center, and the Taipale river, in the east.
